PRICE, Marie, May 18, 1919 – Feb. 21, 2013, long-time resident of San Leandro, passed away on February 21, 2013 at the age of 93. She was widely known in the Washington Manor neighborhood as the "lady in blue," because of the blue jogging suit she always wore when she walked. From 1970 to 2004, Marie could be found on any given day walking a three-mile stretch through the Manor, waving at people going to work and children on their way to school. Marie always greeted everyone with a smile and made many friends over the years. In 2004, Marie left her usual route and began walking with her husband at the San Leandro Marina. She made new friends there, including the resident squirrels. Everyone seemed to enjoy her company. Her family loved being asked if they were related to the "lady in blue," and seeing how happy she could make people with just her smile and cheery demeanor. Marie stopped her daily walking routine in 2006, when her health began to decline. Her family figures she walked approximately 39,000 miles in her lifetime, which works out to about one and a half times around the earth. For the last five years, Marie has lived at an Alzheimer's care facility in Castro Valley, earning the nickname "Smiley." Even as she battled a debilitating disease, she loved life and tried to pass that on to others. Marie was the oldest of 14 children. She is survived by her daughter, Georgina Ruff; son-in-law, Dan Ruff; granddaughter, Sabrina Chicas; grandson-in-law, Mike Chicas; great-grandchildren, Alexander and Madilyn Chicas; sisters, Irene Arruda and Olinda Lee; brothers, George Borges, Manuel Borges and Albert Borges; and many, many nieces and nephews. She was greatly loved and will be missed by all.
